Verbal Description

This is a lower leg and foot. I believe it was modeled, but it could have been molded. I think it is a left leg/foot: the modeling is not realistic, but there is a toe profile indicating a pig toe, and a possible arch. The inner leg is broken just above the ankle, where the clay was curving to meet, presumably another leg. The low break continues on the back of the calf. The front leg is rounded, but the exterior side is flat. The foot on the exterior is particularly flat, and almost looks cut. Above this the leg is less flat, and has vertical striations. From the side and the low break on the back, this may have been attached to something large and may therefore be a censer; I will leave it as a
